Course Description

This class has two primary goals: to introduce the basic concepts of literary analysis and to introduce students to classic works they might not be ready to read on their own, but can enjoy with the support and guidance provided by an engaging teacher and class.

Students will learn ways to approach and appreciate challenging literature and will practice the skills of close literary analysis. They will analyze and respond to literature through discussion, written assignments, projects, presentations, tests, and a variety of fun, hands-on activities.

This reading material is at an upper middle school level. In choosing this class, parents should consider the amount of reading required by students' other subjects and the level of parental support and involvement each individual student will need in order to understand and enjoy reading at this level. Books can be read and/or listened to for auditory support. Please read UHC Middle School Literature for 7th/8th Grade for further details.

*Note: This course satisfies required literature and vocabulary instruction, but please note that this is not a complete English Language Arts course for the student. The teaching parent will need to add the other components of a middle school ELA course: grammar and composition.

To be successful in this class:

Students should be able to follow an assignment calendar for assignments, read an average of 50-75 pages per week, participate in teacher-facilitated class discussions, and follow directions to participate in a variety of assignments that may include creative writing (no formal essays), projects, test/quizzes, and presentations on the works studied.

Parents must be prepared to monitor and support the student's reading and guide him or her in following the teacher's instructions to complete essays, projects, and other assignments.

*Summer Reading Homework: *Click on this link for the summer booklist and be ready to share the title, author, your opinion of the book and give a brief synopsis. Due at the first class

This class uses two separate book lists on a two-year rotation, so students can take it in seventh grade, eighth grade, or both without repeating books. Students are welcome to use audio and electronic versions for reading at home, but paper editions of the books are required in class. No e-readers permitted in class.

The specific editions suggested are recommended, not required, but any edition substituted must be unabridged. After the ISBN for each book (except for drama and poetry, which are rated differently) you can find the Lexile score, which is an estimate of the reading level for each book. You can learn more about Lexile scoring, what it means, and how to use it here.
